

Segeneyti Sub-zone: Fast Growth Via fast Distribution of Services

Written by Kesete Ghebrehiwet

Let's travel to the four directions of Eritrea. Villages, towns, semi-urban centers and major cities would tell stories of their own. What such places would tell is, of course, a story of success—success that has been registered in all domains of development drives. New schools, healthcare and educational institutions, new dams and bridges, roads networks of paramount importance, market places, bus terminals, small-scale industrial plants and the list goes rising high as one continues to travel around the country. "Had many places not been wildernesses?" one would ask. "Have many villages not grown into semi-urban centers?" another would echo a question. "Wasn't this area a barren land?" a fellow passenger would wonder. "I couldn't find the uneven ravens that used to disrupt exciting journeys" a passerby would pose a question for is very amused to see a number of places utterly changed.

Good distribution of healthcare facilities is what one who has been away from such areas could witness. There are three healthcare centers, and three other healthcare institutions in Segeneyti sub-zone which enabled the inhabitants of the sub-zone gain good healthcare services in their respective vicinity. Any healthcare issue is now addressed for effective and timely services have been rendered. People's awareness towards making maximum use of the available healthcare services is a driving force to the gradual success that has been achieved so far. What the sub-zone has not fully addressed is the issue of maternity service for there is a number of mothers who continue to give births traditionally through the assistance of traditional midwife practitioners.

"In terms of healthcare facilities, the Segeneyti sub-zone is by far in a better situation if compared with other localities," Mr. Weldemichael Kidane, Administrator of Segeneyti sub-zone said: "Apart from the endeavors of the

Segeneyti Sub-zone: Fast Growth Via fast Distribution of Services

Written by Kesete Ghebrehiwet

